Summarise the information by selecting and reporting the main features, and make comparisons where relevant.

Model answer

Over three years, the graphic depicts changes in global sales of video material / DVDs, gaming software, and CDs in billions of dollars. It can be seen that video/DVD and gaming software sales have climbed, while CD sales have decreased marginally.

The sale of videos and DVDs increased by almost 13 billion dollars between 2000 and 2003. These things were sold for little under 20 billion dollars in 2000, but by 2003, the value had risen to just over 30 billion dollars.

During this time, game software sales also increased, but not as dramatically. Three years later, sales had risen from over 13 billion dollars in 2000 to just around 20 billion dollars. On the other hand, CD sales declined from 35 billion dollars in 2000 to about 32.5 billion dollars in 2003 within the same period.
