

IELTS WRITING TASK 2

Q-Do you agree or disagree with the following statement? Parents are the best teachers.
-Use specific reasons and examples to support your answer.

Model answer:

My parents and I have had an excellent relationship for the majority of my life. They've backed me up, given me constructive criticism, and taught me a lot about how to live my life. Parents can be essential teachers; yet, they are not always the finest teachers.

Parents may be emotionally too connected to their children. They may only be able to see their children through the eyes of a protector at times. For example, in the name of safety, they may restrict a child's independence. A vacation to a big city could be viewed as a valuable new experience for a teacher. A parent, on the other hand, might consider it too risky.

Another issue is that parents may assume their children's interests are the same as their own. In their minds, they can't seem to separate themselves from their children. So, if they enjoy science, they may try to persuade their child to enjoy it as well. But what if their child's genuine passion is for painting, literature, or car maintenance?

Parents are frequently keen to instill in their children a sense of worth. Should youngsters, on the other hand, always believe what their parents say? Perhaps different generations require different approaches to thinking. Children believe that their parents are always correct while they are young. However, as kids grow older, they discover there are alternative points of view. Parents, particularly older ones, are sometimes unable to keep up with rapid social and technological changes. A student with acquaintances of various races and cultures may discover that her parents are unaware of or uninterested in the digital revolution. Thus, kids must sometimes find their paths to what they believe in.

The most important thing to remember is that we all have several teachers throughout our life. Our parents, teachers, and peers all impart knowledge to us. In addition, we learn from books, newspapers, and television. They're all priceless.
