Q-Crime is often said to be one of the main things that make the quality of life poorer. Crime in developed countries is one of the biggest problems in society. What are the causes of this problem, and what measures can be taken to reduce it?

-Give reasons for your answer and include relevant examples from your knowledge or experience.

Answer:

We all dream of a peaceful and happy life, but often life is disturbed by crime and criminals. As a result, the quality of life becomes poorer. It is more prevalent in developed countries. Several causes lead to the problem and are briefly described in the following paragraphs.

Lack of childhood parental care is one of the leading issues for crime in developed countries- believe many social activists. Kids exercise violence in high schools because they lack the proper guidance and parental care. Since they are not taken care of by my parents, they commit different sorts of crimes, and there are many examples in Europe and the USA where young people have been found guilty of various crimes – even murder.

Secondly, I believe insecurity and discrimination lead people to break the law. When they cannot get their rights as they were supposed to, they try taking control of the rights themselves, leading to criminal activities. A kid of a single mother or single father family is more prone to commit crimes. A 1983 study reveals that 60% of child abuse occurred in such conditions by the mother or the father, leading to a behavioral disorder among them and inspiring them to violate the law.

Solving the issue appears daunting as the problem did not grow overnight. The corrective measures should come first from the family. When a child knows its social responsibilities and how things work, it will behave in order. The parents, teachers, and other relatives have to take responsibility for children to make them better citizens. The government must ensure citizens have access to proper education and other human rights. A combined effort of both people and the government is required to tackle the crime.

In summary, a sense of security should be developed among adult people feeling threatened by society, and thus they could be prevented from being outlaws. I think some motivational attempts from the government may be helpful in this case in line with parental care.
