

IELTS WRITING TASK 2

Q-Some people believe that teenagers should be required to do unpaid community work in their free time. This can benefit teenagers and the community as well.

To what extent do you agree or disagree.

Every country's backbone is its children. As a result, many people believe that young people should be encouraged to engage in social work because it will flourish society and individualistic development. I, too, believe that this motivation has more advantages than disadvantages.

To begin with, children's social work is easily associated with personality development because they tend to communicate with a variety of people during this drive, which leads to polished verbal skills. For example, suppose they begin convincing rural people to send their children to school. In that case, they must have a persuasive attitude and develop oral skills to deal with various people. This enhanced ability will serve them well in all aspects of their lives. Aside from that, actual life values such as tolerance, patience, team spirit, and cooperation can be learned. Aside from that, the young mind serves the country with zeal and provides fulfillment and self-satisfaction. This sense of self-worth fills them with self-assurance and patriotism. Furthermore, traveling and experiencing different cultures and traditions broadens their horizon and adds another feather to their cap.

However, it is said that there is no rose without thrones. Can the disadvantages of this initiation be overlooked? Children go to school, participate in various curriculum activities, and are subject to peer, parent, and teacher pressure. They should not be expected to serve society without regard for their self-interest in a competitive world. This type of pressure may cause them to harbor resentment.

In conclusion, I believe that the idea of a teenager doing unpaid work is excellent, but proper monitoring and care should be provided to avoid unfavorable outcomes.
